The Farmhouse on Elldire Farm c. 1860 is a two story three bay by one room center stair frame house on Jacob Tome Highway just north of Woodlawn. The house faces south/east with the main gable running north/south.

The main block and a new rear ell kitchen wing rests on a fieldstone foundation and is completely covered by aluminum siding. The low sloping composition tile roof has a plain boxed cornice at its base and is closed by a plain bargeboard on each end.

The southeast (main) elevation has an exposed basement. A shed roof porch covers the entire first floor. A central entrance is flanked by two 6/6 sash. The second floor is lighted by the typically arranged 6/6 sash windows.

The gable ends have either one or two 6/6 sash on each floor that flank the interior end brick chimneys. The south stack has been removed above the roofline.

The interior has been partially remodeled. An enclosed center stair is flanked by a room on either side. The northern room has been generally remodeled but the south room has retained its mantel. The slightly molded pilasters with base and capital support a plain frieze and thick mantel shelf. The second floor is divided into three rooms with the main bedroom on the south end. The mantel in this room also remains. It has a similar design with the addition of console brackets that support the thick shelf. Beaded board doors are found throughout the second floor.
